Wade Horton, Administrator

San Luis Obispo County

Wade Horton's official title is administrator of SLO County, but it is really like being CEO of all county operations. Wade is honored to serve in this position that he assumed in November 2017. When he took the position, Wade saw several big challenges ahead including regaining the trust of citizens (particularly in North County), dealing with the significant economic impact resulting from the closure of Diablo Canyon power plant, the lack of mental health resources, homelessness, affordable housing, and the legalization of recreational cannabis.

Wade (right) is a graduate of Cal Poly with a B.S. degree in environmental engineering. He lives in Nipomo with his wife and four children. Prior to assuming his current position as county administrator, Wade was the public works director for SLO County for 3 years and spent 5 years working for the City of SLO. Prior to these public sector jobs, he spent much of his career in the private sector working on engineering and construction projects. Wade was also deployed to Iraq as a member of the Navy Reserve. These broad experiences have made Wade well suited for the complex responsibilities of county administrator.

After assuming this challenging position, Wade spent time looking at the culture of the organization and ways to improve it. He emphasized "We work for the county to serve constituents." He reminded his employees that the work is about the people, not the process. He cited three "pillars" of changing the culture: integrity - do the right thing, teamwork - take care of each other, and communication - need to be open, transparent and effective. His focus on culture includes sending people to leadership academies, recruiting the best people, and outreach to private sector and non-profit community partners. Wade sees big opportunities looking at "regionalism" such as the new airport that provides broad economic benefits to all local communities in the region.
